

Doctor of Chiropractic or Medical Doctor?

Who You Choose For What Does Matter.

You've heard it before... "Chiropractors are not real doctors", but is there more to this debate than meets the eye? Who would you say is your primary health care provider? Perhaps there is more we should consider when making such an important decision like this.

Most people do not know how well educated their Chiropractor really is.

Most people are socially conditioned to simply trust everything the medical association says or does.

Most people would not consider their Chiropractor to be their primary "health" care advisor, and their medical doctor as their "emergency" care provider.

Then again, the times are changing, aren't they?

Consider the number of hours invested to attain a Doctor of Chiropractic degree combined with the difference in focus and approach to patient care... THEN ASK YOURSELF... who do I really want to be my primary "health" care provider, and who do I want as my "emergency" care provider?

Yes, we are fortunate to have the level of emergency care that we have here in our country. However, should we be going to the Doctor of Chiropractic first and foremost for our health and wellness needs INSTEAD of the medical doctor?

Perhaps this could lead to a reduced need for medication and surgery later in life. Perhaps this could lead to a healthier, happier life. Perhaps our children should go to a Chiropractor like they go to a dentist. This is exactly what the smartest and healthiest people we know are doing nowadays. We are so glad you chose chiropractic. It was, and will remain, one of your best decisions.
